

Amy Richardson, JD

ATTORNEY

Amy Richardson is a licensed attorney and has been practicing at The Atkinson Firm since 2006. She received her law degree from the University of Miami where she was a Miami Scholar and the Executive Director of the school's Wrongful Convictions Project.

Ms. Richardson represents associations of regulatory boards in all matters relating to their operations, including advising staff and boards of directors, drafting model legislation, and providing counsel on the development and administration of licensure examination programs. She conducts extensive legal research on her clients' behalves and is a regular speaker at their meetings and those of other stakeholders. She also assists clients with corporate formation and general governance.

Ms. Richardson is a past Chair of the Chicago Bar Association's Trade and Professional Associations Law Committee and is a member of both the Chicago and Illinois Bar Associations.

"The most important aspect of legal representation is to build a trusting and collaborative relationship with my clients, enabling me to anticipate their needs and be proactive in providing exceptional services."